BELMONT IS PIQUED

Cast Snur at Gen. Randolph at Club Table.

WHAT SOCIETY IS SAYING

White House is Not Alone in Frowning on the Social Aspirations of the Wealthy New Yorkers—The Chevy Chase Club Episode as It is Viewed by Both Sides.

"I do not care to sit at a table with that man," meaning Gen. Randolph—"who is reported to have once been a soldier."

This remark, or its equivalent, made by Mr. Perry Belmont to a group of gentlemen, Gen. Wallace Randolph included, at the Metropolitan Club a few days ago, came as a sequel to the withdrawal of Mr. Belmont's name as a candidate for membership in the Chevy Chase Club. Gen. Randolph, formerly chief of artillery and a gentleman with a fine military record, is commonly understood to have been one of those who objected to Mr. Belmont's becoming a member of the Chevy Chase Club. The contemptuous, not to say insulting, remark made by the New Yorker at the Metropolitan was not openly resented at the moment. Gen. Randolph presently withdrew and there was no altercation, as has been reported. Yesterday, however, it was said that the incident had been, or would be, formally presented to the board of governors of the Metropolitan Club and that, in the absence of apology, Mr. Belmont's expulsion might possibly follow. Much feeling has been engendered, but the members, true to club etiquette, decline to discuss the subject or comment upon it in any way outside their own circle.

Topic of Clubs and Society.

The failure of Mr. Belmont to obtain membership in the Chevy Chase Club is the most discussed topic in social and club circles of Washington. It is undeniable that, since coming to the Capital the Belmonts have succeeded in a somewhat marked degree in capturing the ultra set. The functions which they have given at the Morgan mansion, which they are now occupying, pending the completion of the palace on New Hampshire avenue, have been most elaborate. High-class vaudeville artists have been brought over from New York, and even Caruso was on one occasion the magnet to draw the social set. Naturally, with such entertainments, the Belmonts have cut a conspicuous figure during the seasons. But these functions, old Washingtonians say, have appealed to the nouveau riches, the clubbers, and political friends rather than to representative Washington society. Indeed, earnest protest was entered yesterday in high quarter against these statements which appeared in The Washington Herald.

"There is not a house closed to them, with the sole exception of the Executive Mansion. They have become popular with the officials and diplomats and the old Washington set."

"Altogether, they have attained a position which is enviable in this city, where society is becoming equal in importance to the official class."

Close to the New Yorkers.

A gentleman of the highest social standing, representative of the best Washington society, said that the foregoing statements were far from correct. Not only the White House, but "hundreds of homes," as this gentleman expressed it, have been closed to the Belmonts. Ambassadors have declined their invitations—notably the British—and this is true, also, of not a few of the social leaders who are most prominent as dinner-givers and participants in the really important functions of the season.

No secret is made of the basis of this objection to the Belmonts. It all comes of the somewhat notorious divorce proceedings of only a few years ago. Their experience here has been much the same—of being carried to the same extent—as their experience in New York and Newport, where the old and representative families refused to forgive or forget the episode in question.

As showing the feeling here on the subject it is worth mentioning that the gentlemen whose names were published in connection with the withdrawal of Mr. Belmont's name from the Chevy Chase Club have been warmly commended for their course in the matter.

Not the First Such Episode.

It is recalled that Mr. Belmont failed two years in succession to be admitted to membership in the Bachelors' German, which organization follows the club plan of election and it is reported that the limited and exclusive Country Club is also closed to him. The recent incident, therefore, was not the first of its kind. His election to membership in the New York clubs, as well as the Metropolitan Club here, dates back many years. Especial emphasis is put upon the fact that the Chevy Chase and Bachelors' German are purely social in character.

It is and long has been an open secret that the White House has frowned upon the social aspirations of the Belmonts. No pretense of concealment of the fact has been made. The New Yorkers are distinctly and decidedly persona non grata not only at the White House, but in administrative society in its general sense. The barrier is too strong to be overcome. But, as already indicated, the opposition is by no means confined to officials or to those in society who follow the White House lead. Old Washingtonians are markedly conservative, and in the case of the Belmonts this conservatism has to a certain extent taken the form of exclusion.

View of Mr. Belmont's Friends.

Mr. Belmont was out of the city yesterday. Those who spoke for him scoffed at the suggestion that the Chevy Chase affair might prompt him to give up his residence in Washington. They said that he had every reason to be satisfied with his social position.

relationships here, which were of the best and of his own choosing. He had never before been so disturbed, they said, by ill-feeling which might exist toward him in any quarter. They also ridiculed the idea that he was breaching the palace at New Hampshire avenue and B street out of spite against Mr. Thomas Nelson Page, as has been said and published. He selected the site, they said, solely because of its beauty and adaptability for such a home as he wished in Washington. Beyond the natural pique which would come to any man as the result of the Chevy Chase episode, these friends declared that Mr. Belmont was indifferent and unconcerned, being quite content with his status here and the friends he has made.

Statement by President Denny.

Col. Frank L. Denny, president of the Chevy Chase Club, made the following statement last night:

"The name of Mr. Belmont was never voted upon by the board of governors of the Chevy Chase Club. Together with many other names, Mr. Belmont was mentioned as a member of the board of governors, but he was not elected. He was elected at once that there were several who opposed the suggestion, and his name was withdrawn immediately. Nothing more was said about the matter at that time. The application went over for future consideration."

Further effort is to be made by certain members of the Chevy Chase Club to eventually have Mr. Belmont made a member. They see no special significance in the fact that two of the governing board approved his name. The question, they say, may be brought about in the future, or may be postponed indefinitely. However, those who want Mr. Belmont as a member of the club assert that they are determined in their efforts.

Although the members of the board of governors are not inclined to discuss the incident, several of them have no hesitation in saying that they will use every endeavor to ultimately gain for Mr. Belmont a membership in the association.

FRANCIS MILLER DEAD.

Was Treasurer of the Home Savings Bank—Funeral Saturday.

Francis Miller, treasurer of the Home Savings Bank, and one of the oldest residents of Washington, died suddenly yesterday at his home, 636 L street northwest. Although Mr. Miller had recently complained of feeling ill, he was at his desk yesterday, and late in the afternoon attended a meeting of the executive committee of the bank.

Mr. Miller, who was a native of Germany, was eighty years old, and for the last six years was a resident of this country. Returning from a visit to Germany at the time of the breaking out of the civil war, he responded to the call for volunteers, but before his enlistment was called upon by Secretary Stanton and detailed at the Government Printing Office. He was the first president of the Columbia Building Association, and was chosen to fill the office of treasurer of the Home Savings Bank upon its organization eight years ago.

Mr. Miller was one of the first members of St. Mary's German Catholic Church, and did much charitable work. He was also a member of the Old German Association. Funeral services will be held to-morrow at 9:30 o'clock from St. Mary's Church. Interment will take place in St. Mary's Cemetery.

The Society Event at Benning.

Saturday, The Chevy Chase Hunters' Steeplechase race, gentlemen riders in hunting costumes, distance about two and a half miles. Also the Washington Nursery Stake race of four and one-half furlongs, and four other good races.

A Minstrel Show and Dance.

Carroll Institute Hall to-night will be the scene of much mirth and joy, the occasion being an old-time minstrel show and dance, given by the Greater Washington Minstrel Troupe, under the auspices of the "Nopods." This club is composed of about twenty-five of Washington's embryo business men, and has only been organized since December of last year. The club gives this show to raise funds for a permanent clubhouse. A very attractive programme has been arranged, and, encouraged by the large sale of tickets, a very large crowd is expected. Among the features of the programme is Chester R. Spenser, a young man with a most pleasing baritone voice. Mr. Spenser will sing several popular songs, being assisted by illustrations.

The Chevy Chase Hunters' Steeplechase Race Saturday.

At Benning, nearly two and one-half miles. The society event of the present Benning spring meeting. Also the Washington Nursery Stake race, for two-year-olds, four and one-half furlongs, for two-year-olds, and four other first-class races.

Bride Bouquets that Evince the Latest Ideas of "Smartness." Shaffer, 14 & L.

IN THE SOCIAL WORLD

Miss Frances Williams Married to Mr. W. W. Mein.

SOCIETY CROWDS ST. THOMAS'

Fashionable Gathering Witnesses Ceremony Performed by Rev. Dr. C. Ernest Smith—Church Beautifully Decorated—Newly Wedded Couple Going to Johannesburg.

The marriage of Miss Frances Williams, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Williams, to Mr. William Wallace Mein was celebrated yesterday at high noon at St. Thomas Church, Rev. Dr. C. Ernest Smith. The body of the edifice was decorated with palms and hydrangeas, while the altar was banked with ferns and Easter lilies.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, wore a most becoming empire gown of white satin, with yoke and very full sleeves of Brussels lace. Her tulle veil was fastened by a wreath of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. Her only ornament was a necklace of diamonds, with a sapphire pendant. Miss Gertrude Williams served as maid of honor for her sister.

The bridesmaids were Miss Dorothy Williams, Miss Ruth Perkins, Miss Katherine Jennings, and Miss Virginia Fields, of Stockbridge, Mass., who looked particularly charming in costumes of blue chiffon, with bodices and sleeves of lace. Their hats were large Gainsboroughs, with pink black plumes, and they carried pink roses tied with long ribbon streamers. The bride's gifts to her attendants were gold bar pins set with turquoise and pearls. The ushers were Hon. Butler Ames, Mr. Frederick Faust, Mr. Thomas Riggs, Jr., and Mr. Clarence Folles, of San Francisco. Mr. Albert Carroll acted as best man.

A wedding breakfast was served after the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Williams, where the wedding present, which were of great number and beauty, were shown. Mr. and Mrs. Mein will live in Johannesburg, South Africa, where Mr. Mein is interested in some valuable mines.

One of the most interesting weddings of the Easter season was that of Miss Ellette Campbell Tenney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bernard Tenney, and Mr. Robert Downie Moore. The ceremony took place at the Church of the Covenant and was celebrated by the Rev. Dr. Thomas S. Hamilton. The church was decorated with Easter lilies and palms, a bank of them being arranged as a background for the wedding party in the chancel. The bride's gown was of white satin trimmed with point and Brussels lace, and her veil was carried with the conventional wreath of orange blossoms. The bride bouquet was of lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor was Mrs. J. L. Wirtz of Staunton, Va. Miss Mary Frances Collison acted as maid of honor. Both the matron and maid of honor wore tulle veils of white lace over pale green chiffon, and they carried bunches of orchids. The bridesmaids, all of whom were cousins of the bride, were Miss Ruth Tenney, of Plainfield, N. J.; Miss Elsie Dulles, of Philadelphia; Miss Edna Moore, of New York; and Miss Gertrude Fry, who was dressed in pale green gown made in Empire style, with short tulle veils, which were caught to their coronet-dressed hair by wreaths of green leaves. Mr. Charles Burkholder, of Charlotte, N. C., acted as best man for Mr. Moore. The bride's gifts to her attendants were of great number and beauty. Mr. Robert Downie Moore, of Hartford, Conn., Mr. Edward Kimball, of Salt Lake City, Utah; Mr. Carroll Proctor, of Schenectady, N. Y., and Mr. Walter Henson, cousin of the bridegroom, of Athens, Ga.

The bride is well known in this city, her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Moore, being among the oldest residents of this city. Her great-grandfather, Henry Ingles, was an intimate of George Washington, and one of the few present at his bedside when he died.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Robert Mure, mother of the groom, of Athens, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Downie, an aunt and uncle; Mrs. William Mure and Miss Mure, of Charleston, S. C.; Col. and Mrs. Frederick Hodgson, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cove, Jr., of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. John Welsh Dulles, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. William Moore and Master Frederick L. Moore, of New York.

Mrs. Taft, wife of the Secretary of War, and Miss Ide, whose father was such an exceptionally popular official in the Philippines, left town yesterday and will sail on Saturday for Porto Rico, where they will join Secretary Taft and his party on their tour of investigation. Miss Ide, who made her debut in Washington last winter, was one of the most popular young women of the past season.

Miss Edgaria Hastings gave a luncheon yesterday, which will be remembered as one of the prettiest of the season. The table was decorated with La France roses and maidenhair fern. Among the guests were Miss Perle Anderson, Miss Barrett, Miss McFarlane, Miss Mildred Lambert, Miss Elena Calderon, Miss Barbara Kauffman, Miss Eleanor Granger, the Misses Smith, Miss Marie Calvo, Miss Egan, Miss Raymond, and Miss Julia Cheronberry, of Baltimore, Md.

Mrs. Frederick A. Johnson gave a luncheon yesterday afternoon at her home, Rose Terrace, in Holmead Manor, in honor of her guests, Mrs. Herbert N. Chadbourne, of Minneapolis, and Mrs. Archer L. Agatin, of Duluth.

Another hostess at luncheon yesterday was Mrs. Armistead Peter, whose guests were Mrs. Walter Gibson Peter, Mrs. Charles McPee, Mrs. Gordon Stewart, Miss Peter, Mrs. Ralph Jenkins, Mrs. James C. Merrill, Mrs. Frank Moorehead, Mrs. John Watts Kearney, and Mrs. Henry Fitch.

Miss Alina Prince, whose engagement to Mr. Sidney Strauss is announced, will be at home on Sunday evening, from 8 to 10:30.

Mrs. Z. T. Carpenter gave the second of her bridge whist parties yesterday afternoon. Her drawing-rooms were bowered of flowers, and the favors unique and interesting. After the game was over, tea was served, and a number of guests not included in the whist party called.

Mrs. Andrew Reed, of Baltimore, whose son is one of the leaders in the performance to be given by the Paint and Powder Club of "Don of Doraz," is the guest of Mrs. Jimmie Barbour, Mrs. Barbour will give a large supper after the performance Saturday night, to all the leading persons in the caste.
